For Guljeet: photos, measurements and a few questions

Everything the website still needs from you, on one quiet day. Nothing here is urgent and nothing needs a computer: a phone, a tape measure, a window and a plain cream or white sheet of card are enough. Send photos to Ekjot as documents (WhatsApp: the paperclip, then Document), not as photos, so they keep their full size.

1. The photographs

These matter more than anything else on the site. Someone paying forty or fifty pounds for a piece they cannot touch decides almost entirely from the photograph. The aim is that every piece looks like it belongs to the same collection.

Set up once

- Daylight from a window, not direct sun. A bright, overcast day is best. No lamps, no flash.
- A plain cream or white card or sheet, flat on the table, large enough that nothing else shows.
- Phone held straight above, parallel to the table. Tap the piece on the screen to focus.
- Hold the phone upright (portrait), with the piece filling most of the frame but not touching the edges.
- No filters, no text, no stickers, no editing. Turn off any beauty or HDR setting if you can.

For each piece, two photos

- Flat: the piece laid out on the card. Necklaces in a soft oval with the clasp at the top; earrings side by side; bracelets in a circle.
- Worn or in hand: the piece on a neck, an ear or a wrist, or held in an open palm. This is how people judge size. Face need not be in it.
- For beaded and painted pieces, a third photo close up, so the detail shows.
- Keep the same spot, same light and same distance for every piece, so the whole collection matches.

Start with the necklaces and the Christmas ornaments; their current photos are the ones that look least like the rest of the site.

2. Measurements

Buyers online cannot tell how big anything is. One measurement per piece is enough, written in the table at the end of this pack or in the spreadsheet.

- Necklaces: length end to end with the clasp closed, in cm, and the height of the pendant if there is one.
- Earrings: the drop, from the top of the hook to the lowest point, in cm.
- Bracelets: laid flat end to end, in cm. For stretch bracelets, say so. Rings: the inside diameter in mm, or the UK letter size.
- Magnets, charms, ornaments: height and width in cm.

3. Materials to confirm

For the new pieces I described the materials from the photos and wrote "-tone" wherever I could not be sure (turquoise-tone, coral-tone). The spreadsheet has a question beside each piece. Where a stone or metal is real, say so and the site will say so; where it is glass or plated, that is fine too, the site just needs to be honest.

4. Questions only you can answer

Repairs. If a piece breaks or needs restringing, may the site say "Send it back and I will mend it"? Yes, no, or yes for a small charge?

The opening line. The first words on the home page should be yours. Pick one, change one, or write your own:

- (a) I make small things that are meant to be kept.
- (b) Every piece here was made once, at my table in London, and will not be made again.
- (c) Beads, thread and clay, chosen slowly, made by hand.

What arrives. How is a piece packed when it is posted (box, pouch, card, tissue)? Please take one photo of a wrapped piece.

Clips, charms and rings. The five posy clips, the two Mela charms and the nine rings are each shown as one listing. Does each of those exist exactly once? Would you rather each had its own page once photographed on its own?

Piccadilly. What are the hours for TAP Piccadilly on 28 and 29 November?

Bundles. Suggested: any three ornaments £24; three rings £10; Lemon Path and Meadow Path together £36. Happy, or change them?

Your portrait. Is there a full-size copy of the photo by the stone wall? Send it as a document so it keeps its quality.

5. The pieces, one row each

60 pieces, every one a one-off. Tick the photo columns as you go. The same table is in the spreadsheet if you would rather type.
